RICH MR. TAYLOR STILL REFUSES TO PARDON PROTEGE'S MARRIAGE.

Isilp. L. I., Sept. 7.—There has been no reconciliation with her mother and the rich George C. Taylor, in the case of Lenn Head Bodley, who became Mrs. Bodley by eloping with Frederick William Bodley a week ago. The young couple knew that their marriage would raise a storm in the family. In fact, the girl had been told that if she married Bodley, who was an employe on the Taylor place, she would be cut off by Mr. Taylor, who had planned to make her his heir. But they did not think it possible for their romance to be firmly frowned on for so long as a week, and expected to be fully reinstated in the good graces—and the will—of the rich man before this time. However, they were wrong in their forecast. Mr. Taylor still easy:

"Never shall Lena Head have one cent of my fortune."

As he spoke Mr. Taylor raised himself with an effort from his chair, for he is just recovering from a severe illness, and to emphasise his words he struck the floor with his foot. His cyes flashed, and, although he is of a philegmatic disposition, every sinew seemed to echo the words that he had spoken.

"Let the girl ever enter my gates, and I done me irreparable injury, and henceforth I do not know her."

Mr. Taylor paused, and the girl's mother, who was in the room, spoke. Her face was flushed and she spoke with an effort.

The Mother is Bitter.

"The girl has disgraced the stock from which she is sprung," flashed Mrs. Head, "and I shall never again receive her, It has been said that she is Mr. Taylor's heir by blood. She is no kin of his, and what he may have intended to give her as the daughter of his friend and companion is forfeit.

"My daughter has poisoned my love for her and sacrificed to a whim the great furner and sacrificed to a whim the

of wild animals is one of Mr. Taylor's fauk.

Where the Marriage Occurred.

In a grove to the left of the residence is a small building, the scene of Miss Head's romantic marriage. It is called "Lena's Museum." for there Mr. Taylor and the girl's mother have placed for her the curios that they have collected on their travels abroad. The hall is finished in mahogany, and there have been placed the relica that the girl most admired.

It was in this room that the marriage was celebrated. The second-story is upholstered with rare luxuriance. Here there is a bedroom and study, where for nine years Miss Clarice, the girl's English governess, in structed her. It was this child's pride to call this her home, and it was by her wish that she was married here.

Captain John Seaman of Bayport, L. L. who, at Miss Head's request, acted as one of the witnesses at the marriage, had a stormy interview with Mr. Taylor. Captain Seaman is a professional guard for the oyster beds near Mr. Taylor's estate and had always been privileged to keep his boats in the Taylor canal. He has often been employed by Mr. Taylor and has looked upon the elderly millionaire as nis patron. After the marriage lad become public Captain Seaman visited Mr. Taylor in the hope of bringing about a reconciliation. Then the storm broke. The Captain was ordered to take his boats from the canal and never again set foot on the Taylor estate.

Mrs. Bodley is 18 years old and her hushand is 22. According to Mrs. Head, the girl last year refused a proposal of mar-

Mr. and Mrs. Bodley say of their marriage:

"It was purely a love match, nothing else. We have known each other for years—nearly all of our lives, it seems like now—but within the last two weeks it began to be all different. All at once we decided to get married. We did so, and we are here on our honeymoon."

"We know of no will making Mrs. Bodley an heiress," the husband said. "We have heard it said that Mr. Taylor would leave her a large bequest, but she has never seen such a document and has never been told so anthentically. Such a possibility was never considered by either of us. It may be true, but it did not occur to us to give any thought of it."

Mr. Taylor is one of the heirs to the vast estate of the late Moses Taylor, millionaire merchant. His income is a very large one.

DIED RATHER THAN TESTIFY. Penitentiary Guard Wanted as

progress here, R. G. Hunter, a guard in progress here, R. G. Hunter, a guard in the Western Penttentiary, committed sui-cide by shooting himself in the head. Be-side the body was found this note, written on the margin of a newspaper: "Let no one say that I have been guilty of any wrong act, which I never was, and it of any wrong act, which I never was, and it may try to appear that I am, but it is false as h-l. But my conscience is as clear as any man's alive, but cannot stand to act as witness. Good-by to all. Praise God, from whom all biessings flow.

"R. G. HUNTER.

"Walted four hours for answer and did not get it. I bid all my friends good-by."
Several months ago William Kiser, an aged man, was found dead in his home, aged man, was found dead in his home, having been killed to hide a robbery. James Murphy and two men named Mong were arrested on a charge of having committed the crime and placed in jail. Soon afterwards the jail was partly wrecked by dynamite, and an inmate named Thomas escaped. The fugilive was recaptured, however, and the accused men were taken to the Penitentiary for safe-keeping. Since the trial began there have been sensational developments, and allegations of a conspiracy to procure the conviction of the accused men have been made by the defense. The case has, to a great extent, been worked up men have been made by the defense. The case has, to a great extent, been worked up in the Penitentiary, and thence come some of the leading witnesses for the prosecution, among whom was Hunter.

Whether Hunter knew the facts of the alleged conspiracy may never be divulged. There seems little doubt, however, that the case has been exhaustively canvassed in the Penitentiary, and that every scrap of evidence that could be used against the acoused men has been carefully prepared by the prosecution. Hunter's note leads to the belief that he feared to divulge all he knew of the case, and that it might be extorted from him should be appear on the witness stand.

Prayer for the recovery of President Mc-Kinley will be offered to-day at Christ Church Cathedral, at various Episcopal churches throughout the city and at such churches throughout the city and at such of the Catholic churches as the priests in charge desires. No public order of general prayer will be issued by the authorities of either church.

Archbishop Kain stated yesterday that he hoped all Catholics would offer prayers for the recovery of the President, but that it was not the custom to order general prayer for a noninember of the church, nor could he have issued a general order to take effect to-day if he had been so minded. "It would have been difficult to communicate with all the Catholic churches in the city in time to have such an order go into effect," he said, "but there is no doubt that prayer will be offered in many of the churches for the President's recovery. The matter rests with the individual priests, who, I am sure, will all instruct their congregations to offer individual prayer for the President."

Neither Bishop Daniel S. Tuttle nor Dean Davis of Christ Church Cathedral is in the city at present, but the Reverend Allan K. Smith of the cathedral stated that prayer would be offered to-day for the President, and that mention would be made of his condition in the sermon.

"It is not the custom to order general prayer." he said, 'but in a case like the present every Episcopal clargyman will no doubt offer prayer in his church for the President's speedy recovery. At the cathepresident's speedy recovery. At the cathedral prayer will be made for those in authority and for the sick, and, if the wounds should result fatally, prayer for the affilied and for the lead would be offered. These same prayers will unquestionably be made at most of the Episcopal churches."

SIX COUPLES WED AT CLAYTON. Return of Justice Greensfelder

Followed by Rush of Business.

Followed by Rush of Business.

Justice J. B. Greensfelder, matrimonial executive of the Clayton Gretna Green, returned yesterday from a two months' vacation at Nantucket Besch, and the matrimonial market at the county seat, which has been in a state of lethargy all summer, seemed to have revived with his return, for in the course of the day six happy couples, attracted by the allurements of quiet and romanile marriages, journeyed to the place. Among the couples were Martin I. Madden of St. Louis and Anna Love of Joplin. Paternal opposition to her fiance because he was a Catholic was what caused the young bride elect to come to St. Louis a week ago, ostensibly to visit her friend, Mrs. James Dean of No. 4065 Olive street, but in reality to make preparations for her marriage to Madden. The latter, who fived at the home of his sister. Mrs. Edward Schrantz, No. 393 Olive street, said that he would have another ceremony performed by a priest in deference to the wishes of his relatives. The young couple will live in St. Louis. Mrs. Madden wrote to her father last night, asking forgiveness.

Frank M. Bollinger of No. 1435 Sullivan avenue and Caroline Fischer of Norwalk. O., went to Clayton to be married because the bridegroom formely lived in the county. The other couples that visited Clayton yesterday on matrimony bent were Frank P. McGruder and Emma Schaeffer of St. Louis; Benjamin Plerson and Willie Mosely of Kirkwood: Bernard A. Schmitt and Alice B. Reid of St. Louis, and Nonie Bryant and Gertle Jackson of Kirkwood.

Two Gardeners Claim Waters Gin Grass Creek

Gin Grass Creek.

Joseph Marquard of No. 1271 Switzer avenue brought suit yesterday against Frederick Tebbe and his wife. Louisa, of No. 320 Tracy road, for $5.000 damages.

Marquard and Tebbe are gardeners near Baden. Marquard leases sixteen acres and Tebbe occupies seven acres of his own. The Gin Grass Creek runs through the grounds of both. The gardeners have been in the habit of using the water from the creek in dry weather to moisten their grounds. It is alleged that Tebbe dammed the creek, preventing the water from flowing through the ground of Marquard. Marquard sileges that his crop was damaged because of lack of water. The amount of his actual damages, he says, is $2,000.

ACCUSES BILLY CONDON.

Harry Gundlach Says He Was Beaten Without Provocation. Beaten Without Provocation.

William Condon, a partner of "Jack" Williams in the possession of a sulcon at Nineteenth and Chestnut streets, was arrested yesterday morning on a charge of having assaulted Harry Gundlach of No. 305 North Compton avenue.

Gundlach says that he was walking in front of No. 1905 Market street, Priday night, when Condon stepped out and street him without provocation. Gundlach's Tess was severely bruised.

Condon was bailed out by John R. Butler a son of Colonel Ed Butler. A charge of assault to kill was placed against him, but it was afterwards decided to send him, to the Police Court on a charge of disturbing the peace.

Report That Mr. Butler Will Get More Patronage.

Boston, Mars., Sept. 7.—Many Bostonians did not enjoy their customary repast of beans to-day, because the scarcity of that staple food amounted to almost a famine. Now, however, owing to a short crop in New York, Michigan, California and Canada last year, the supply a nearly see he may have intended to give her as the daughter of his friend and companion is forfeit.

"My daughter has poisoned my love for her and sacrificed to a whim the great future she had before her. Mr. Taylor and I for fifteen years have been friends and companions. We are congenial and we have lived in the same home—sometimes here or in another of Mr. Taylor's houses; sometimes in my home at Isilp. When this friendship began Lena was only 2 years old. Since then she has accepted of Mr. Taylor's bounty and has had every advantage that a girl could have.

"Her every whim was satisfied. If she wanted a doll, when she was a child, it was given to her. When later in life she wanted ponies, they were at her command. She has bloycles and sailboats, and money has been lavished on her. It is untrue, however, that our houseboat, which cost, $25,000, was built for her. That was for Mr. Taylor's private use."

Mr. Taylor during this discourse sat in an easy chair, slowly emphasizing Mrs. Head's words by nodding his head.

"Understand," he cried, with some vehemence at this point, "that Lena is no relation of mine. She is not my heir; she shall never inherit from me."

Mr. Taylor is a bachelor, well advanced in life. Illness has undermined his health, and friends in Islip said to-day that his death would not be a surprise to them. They said that a sister was his nearest relative by consanguinity, and that Lena, who had al-
